

Letter of recommendation

This letter of recommendation reflects my experience of working with Kjetil Buer during the spring semester of 2015 when teaching an undergraduate course in interaction design at the Department of Information Sciences and Media Studies, University of Bergen, Norway, where I was a Professor at that time. As the teacher responsible for the course I closely collaborated with Kjetil, who, together with another student, worked as a teacher assistant for the course.

Kjetil's contribution to managing and teaching the course was very substantial. His responsibilities included teaching parts of the course material, supervising students' lab work, consulting student groups in their work on course assignments, and taking part in grading individual course assignments and setting up total course grades.

On the basis of my experience I can describe Kjetil Buer as a competent, responsible, reliable, and well-organized person, a good team player, with excellent knowledge in interaction design. In my opinion, Kjetil's skills, knowledge, and personal qualities make him an excellent candidate for a wide range of job positions, including those related to analysis, design, deployment, evaluation, and/or studies of interactive technologies, and I can recommend him without reservation.

I would be happy to answer you potential further inquiries regarding the applicant.

Sincerely,
Victor Kaptelinin
